

Digital Subscriber Line (DSL)

A. General Description

1. DSL provides digital connectivity to a high-speed data link(s) for residence service Customers and business service Customers.
2. DSL consists of central office equipment (a Digital Subscriber Line Access Multiplexer (DSLAM)) and existing copper or fiber facilities extended from the Company's central office to the Customer's premises.
3. DSL is asymmetrical in that more bandwidth is delivered downstream to the Customer than is delivered from the Customer back to the network.

B. Regulations

1. Provision of Service

- a. DSL is provisioned over the Company's existing copper or fiber facilities that provide a connection between the Customer's premises and the Company's central office which provides access to a high speed data provider.
- b. The Company will qualify the DSL between the Company's central office and the Customer's premises. The purpose of the qualification is to determine the availability and suitability of the Company's existing copper facilities that are not suitable for Service.
- c. The Company does not undertake to originate data, but offers the use of its service components, where available, to Customers for the purpose of transporting customer-originated data.
- d. DSL may be provided subject to availability and limitations of Company's central office and outside plant facilities and is only available where technical capabilities permit.
- e. The Company will not provision DSL if the Company reasonably determines that it is not technically feasible over existing facilities that it will cause interference problems with existing service.
- f. During the Company's network maintenance and software updates period(s), it may be necessary to place the DSL out of service. The company also reserves the right to temporarily interrupt DSL at other times in emergency situations.

2. Temporary Suspension of Service

Temporary Suspension of Service is limited to 90 days in a 12 month period.

3. Minimum Service Period

The Minimum Service Period for DSL is one month.
